By A. R. HOWARD JR.

"My most difficult race was a 220-yard handicap, around one track turn, held in Glasgow, Scotland back in 1905," says H. A. Hyman, former track star for the University of Pennsylvania, now a resident of Denison.

Nicknamed "H. A. Flyman," by a British newspaper because of his speed of 49 and 2/5 seconds for the quarter-mile race, Mr. Hyman gained international fame during 1904 and 1905 running under Pennsylvania colors.

Mr. Hyman was born at Mount Vernon, Ohio, May 4, 1881, and began his running career at 18, when he broke the Ohio 100-yard record in 10 seconds. Mr. Hyman's father, a milliner, moved his family to Chicago in 1892, but young Hyman returned to Mount Vernon for his high school education and went from there to Ohio State University, where he was captain of the track team in 1902.

Gets Knee Injury

At Ohio State, Mr. Hyman won the 100, 220 and 440-yard races in all of his meets. Choosing civil engineering for his profession, Mr. Hyman transferred in 1903 to the University of Pennsylvania. He was a track and football letterman for both schools, and it was a football knee injury that forced him to cut short a brilliant running career.

His first visit to England took his track days behind him and a successful career as a construction engineer closed also. Mr. Hyman began to tour the country sight-seeing. Trips took him to Washing-son to reside at 400 West Sears. Since coming to Denison, Mr. Hyman has dedicated himself to golf and other milder forms of sports.

Runners Are Born

Mr. Hyman credits his abstinence from smoking and drinking for much of his inter-collegiate success. "That is the reason that American athletes are the best," he said, adding that during his tour of England he found many English track stars who did not train and were heavy smokers and stout drinkers.

The increase in interest in track by college students and more scientific running surfaces get the credit for lowering the time records in many races, Mr. Hyman believes. "Back when I was running," he explains, "we dug pits in the cinders for our starting blocks, and now almost everybody uses wooden starting blocks—also, the modern tracks are packed much harder and have more resilience than the loose cinder tracks of my day." These improvements, along with better training of track men, may lead eventually to the running of a mile in 4 minutes flat, Mr. Hyman predicts.

The 300 has been included in the programme with the view of seeing Jupp over the distance which he likes best. Hyman and Westney will also run in this race and the interests of Scotland will be confined to RL Watson and WH Welsh, who from the fact that they are both good quarter men, should find the 300 yards to their liking. It is still doubtful if A Shrubbs will be among the competitors, he has engagements to keep which have been entered into early in the season, but pressure from an influential quarter may make him alter his arrangements, in which case we shall have a fine exhibition of distance running from him, John McGough of Bellahouston Harriers, and Butterfield of Darlington. In addition to others of lesser note, Tom Nicholson will meet Shevlin of Yale in the hammer under stirrup-handle conditions, and O'Connor will take part in the jumps along with RG Murray, J Milne, D McRae and a host of others."

Dear Harry:

AS I wrote you some time ago, I sent the clipping to my brother-in-law in Denver and this morning we received a letter from him from which I quote:

"I certainly was interested in the clipping about Harry Hyman. I gathered from it that he has pleasant memories of his visit to England and he certainly has just cause to be proud of his record during the 1905 visit. He was not only 220 yards' champion of England, but the way he won handicap races was something to write home about. we were all convinced that he was at that time the world's greatest, and that, I may add is considerable terrain. It would be hard to convince me that anyone since has equaled the time he hung up in some of his races."

You are still very vivid in his mind and I know you will be pleased to have these remarks as in his mind you were his boyhood hero.

UNITED STATES SENATE

Marcus A. Hanna: A Featured Biography

Mark Hanna excelled in business before applying his considerable talent and enormous wealth to politics. He used both attributes to bolster the presidential campaigns of fellow Ohioans Rutherford Hayes in 1876 and James Garfield in 1880. In 1896 he supported another Ohioan, William McKinley. Managing a savvy, well-funded campaign, Hanna kept McKinley on his front porch, where he welcomed trainloads of voters traveling at Hanna's expense. This famous "front porch campaign" put McKinley in the White House and turned Hanna into a national political figure. President McKinley offered Hanna a cabinet post, but Hanna preferred a seat in the Senate, which he gained in 1897. The unusually high-profile freshman, who served as the president's closest advisor, played a key role in business-labor relations and became such a strong supporter of the proposed Central American canal that senators nicknamed it the "Hannama Canal." By 1904 Hanna was looking for another presidential candidate to support, but he never got the chance to run another campaign. Mark Hanna died of typhoid fever in 1904, just 67 years old.

ATHLETIC MUSEUM ARCHIVE

hello @ Theathleticmuseum.ORG.UK

every lover of the sport.

Now, if there is less talk of legislation and more activity among coaches, looking toward the diversification of play, there will be seen a football season that, in point of real progress, will surpass any previous year in the game's history.

The benefit to the game of a team such as Pennsylvania showed last year is incalculable. The only trouble is that few elevens can have the quarter-back to succeed with such an elaborate and diversified system of play. It was nearer the ideal from the player's and spectacular standpoint than any team that has ever before taken the field. If the men had physically been up to the highest standard, it certainly would have ranked higher than any eleven the college world has ever seen. Let's see what others can do along the same lines this year.

One passing word before the rowing and track seasons of 1905 are forgotten. Attention has been called to one characteristic of the comment upon the results. Almost invariably the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie was referred to as a victory for Courtney over Ten Eyck, and the track championships as a victory for Moulton over Mike Murphy. Cornell was forgotten by nine-tenths of those who figured on the results, and Yale and Syracuse were entirely overlooked. The man who wants to do away with professional training is on the same plane as he who thinks it possible to eliminate the gate receipt feature of college sport—a man of admirable ideals but entirely impractical. But would it not be a good idea for all of us to subordinate the trainer a little more than we are accustomed to doing? That can be done without injury to the sport, and it's pretty nearly time that we began it.

The visit of five American college athletes to England to compete in English games, including the championships, has resulted as all similar invasions since the fashion was introduced some ten years or more ago, with a continuous succession of American victories. The meets in which these men have competed have been too numerous, and in the main too unimportant, to attract more than passing attention. The championships, of course, where the men met contestants of caliber, was a good opportunity to test their merit. While but one victory fell to American skill, the circumstances attending the failure of the others makes them virtual successes.

H. A. Hyman won the furlong dash in 22 2-5 seconds, easily defeating Jupp, the holder of the title and the cream of English sprinters handily. E. S. Amsler, in the hurdles, won his heat and was leading by a last hurdle. J. B. Taylor, the colored quarter-miler, was also leading his field easily in the stretch when he tripped and fell and was out of it. J. B. McDonald, the high jumper, and J. H. McGuckin, the quarter-miler, were unsuccessful in their events, but scored numerous wins in the smaller meetings.

Hyman made what was thought to be a new world's record for the 300-yards in a subsequent contest, but was robbed of his honors by the remeasuring of the track, when it was ascertained that it was a few feet short of the full distance. His speed in the event was equal to his best, which means that the contest was very fast.

The regrettable feature of all such undertakings is that they partake so markedly of the pothunting character that it is hard to sympathize with them. Any legitimate effort to bring about international competitions each true lover of sport is anxious to encourage, but where the invasion is made on an individual account and is significant of nothing but an individual effort, either for glory or gain, it deserves little more than mention. This trip will test the efficiency of the Amateur Athletic Union's effort to control such enterprises, and it will be interesting to see just how the men concerned will comply with the regulations laid down last year by the athletic unions of both countries.

This naturally brings up the whole question of amateur status in the summer activities of college athletes. There have been well-substantiated charges brought against a number of leading college baseball men on the score of summer ball. In the fall it will be interesting to see how the authorities act upon them. The whole fabric of summer baseball is honeycombed with rotteness, and while it adds to the efficiency of the play beyond a doubt, it detracts from the sport something of the highest value, and the honest ball player suffers with the dishonest. Since it is so important that the standard of college sport be kept clean, it is better to make a rule disqualifying all who participate, even though it works a hardship to the few, than to attempt to sift out the evasions of the rule, permitting those who clear their skirts on a technicality to continue in the game while ruling out those who have some legitimate excuse for the infringement of the rule by which they are prohibited from further intercollegiate competition.

Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Cornell and Pennsylvania are all besmirched by the charges recently made. The big three are quoted as offending more seriously than the others, and it behooves all five to cut out, root and branch, all who can not absolutely clear their skirts of even the semblance of wrong doing.

Settlement Of Russo-Pole Dispute Is Dealt New Blow

LONDON, (AP)—The sudden resignation of peasant-born Stanislaw Mikolajczyk as premier of the Polish government-in-exile dealt a severe blow Saturday to British and American efforts to settle the Russian-Polish dispute.

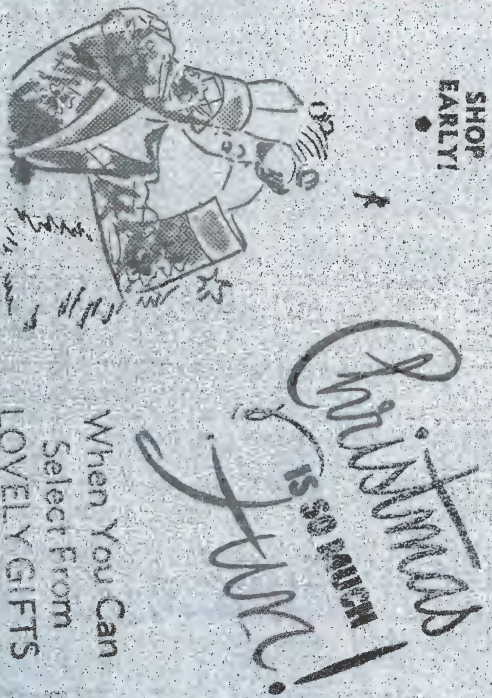

Mikolajczyk was the one man in the Polish government in London acceptable to Moscow and the Soviet-recognized Polish committee of National Liberation at Lublin.

Both Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt openly had placed their entire hopes on him settling the dispute threatening allied unity.

Jan Kwapiński, a Socialist and deputy premier in Mikolajczyk's cabinet, has been asked by President Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz, to form a new government. Kwapiński is a member of a group that had been denounced by Moscow.

It is estimated that the improvement will involve about $2,500,000, including the cost of the land. About one-half of Mr. Eno's estate was bequeathed to relatives and the other half to Columbia University and other institutions.

It was estimated at the final settlement of the will last May that Columbia's share amounted to about $4,000,000, a portion of which was the old Eno home on Fifth Avenue.

This property, which is considered one of the finest and most valuable corners in the lower Fifth Avenue section, was sold by Lucius H. Beers, executor for the Eno estate, and Frederick A. Goetze, treasurer for Columbia University, to H. A. Hyman, President of the newly formed Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street Corporation.

Sharp & Co. negotiated the transaction, the selling price of the property, which has a frontage of 93.5 feet on Fifth Avenue and 152 feet on Tenth Street, being $500,000.

It is the intention of the buyers to improve the entire plot at once with a fourteen-story apartment house divided into small suites from plans by Schwartz & Gross.

Associated with Mr. Hyman in the building operation will be M. Wielandt Sr., M. Wielandt Jr. and Joseph Kresse, the same personnel who last week sold to Vincent Slattery the fifteen-story apartment building just completed by them at 588 West End Avenue under

The residence of the late Amos F. Eno, on the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street, whose will, disposing of an estate valued at about $13,000,000, resulted in seven years' litigation among the heirs, was sold yesterday as a site for a fourteen-story apartment house de luxe.

It is estimated that the improvement will involve about $2,500,000, including the cost of the land. About one-half of Mr. Eno's estate was bequeathed to relatives and the other half to Columbia University and other institutions.

The property on which this latter structure was erected was purchased by the builders last February and within nine months the site was excavated, the structure completed, all apartments leased and the sale consummated.

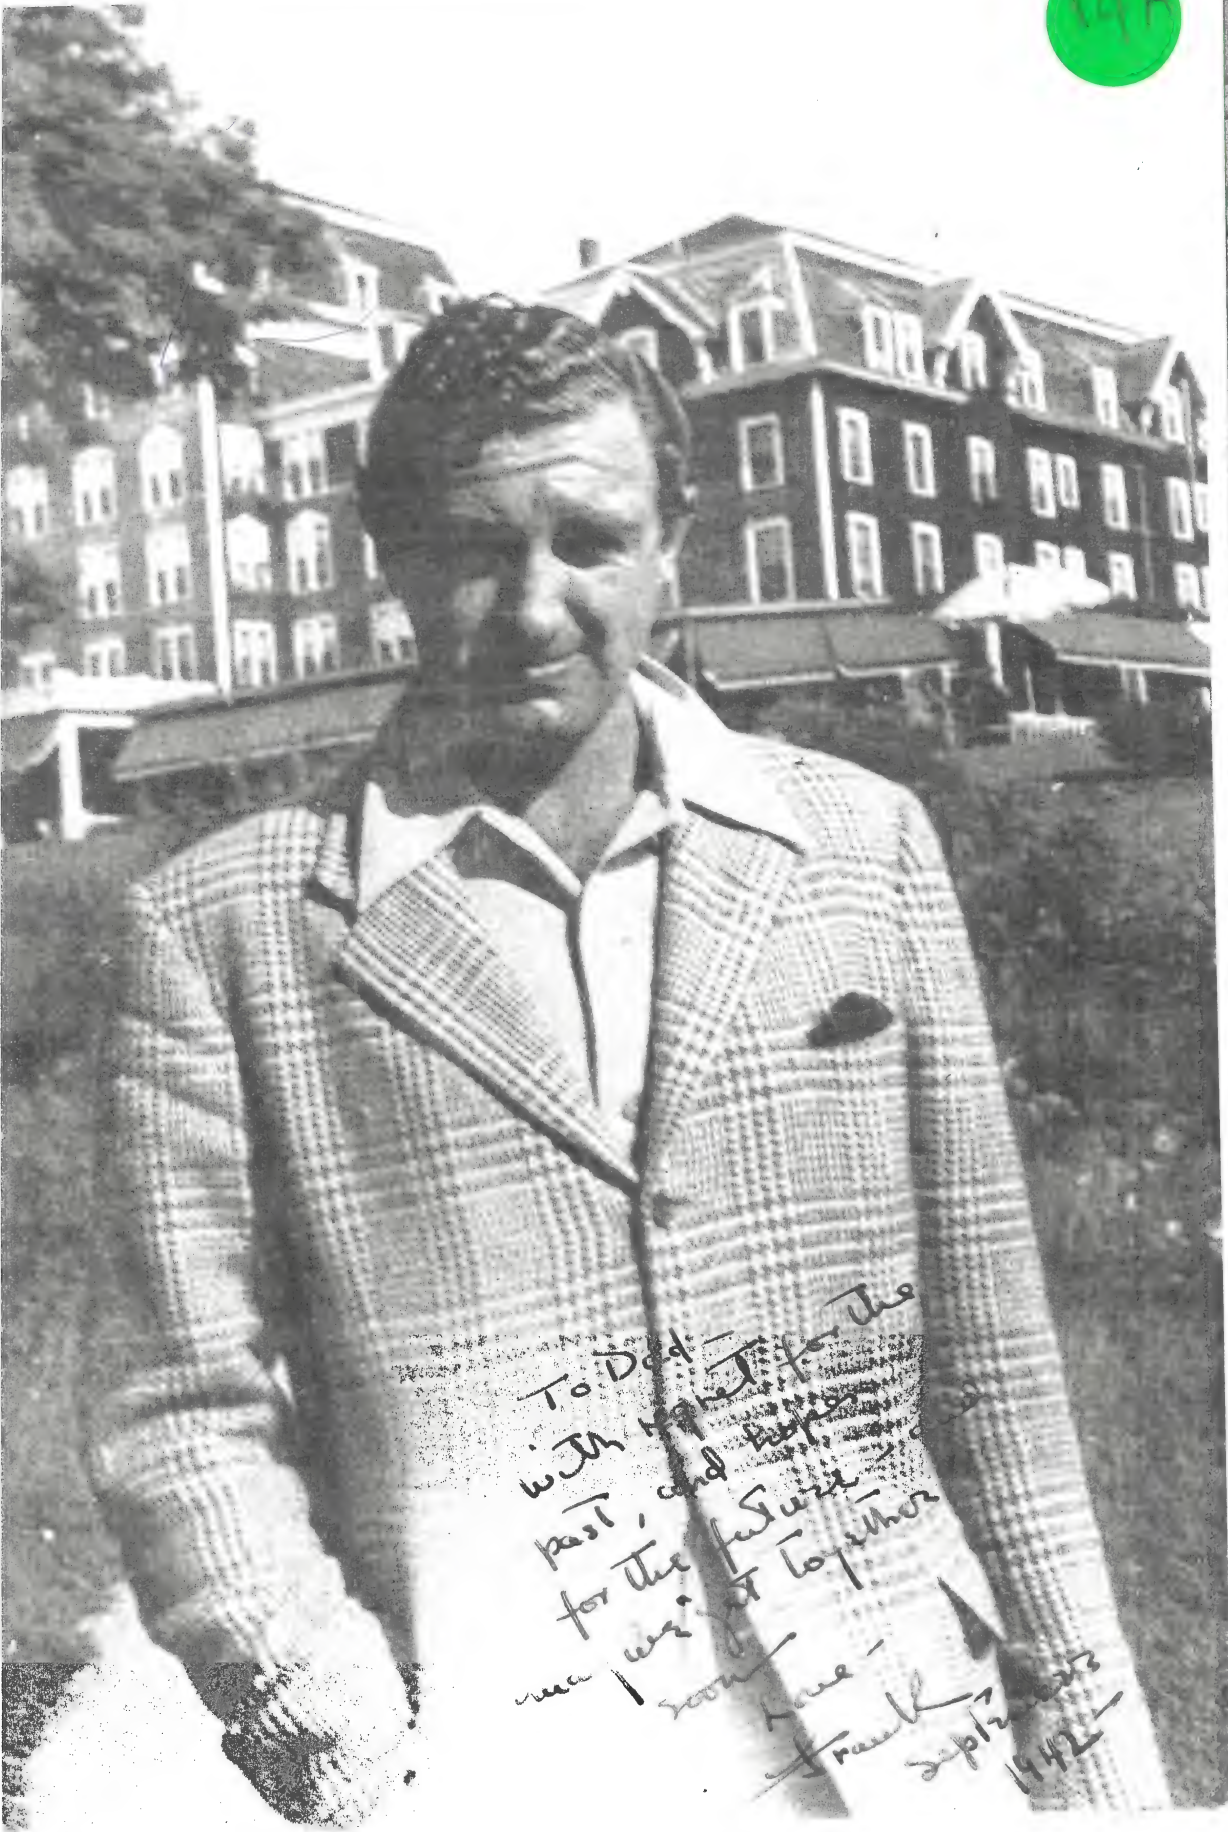

Frederick Brown Buys Broadway Corner. One of the largest real estate transactions closed recently in the Madison Square section of Broadway was consummated yesterday by Frederick Brown, who purchased the sixteen-story fireproof mercantile building on a plot 96.1 by 73.5 by irregular at 920 Broadway, on the southeast corner of Twenty-first Street.

The seller was the 920 Broadway Corporation, which is a subsidiary of William Henry Barnum & Co. The building, it is stated, is rented for more than $103,000 per annum.

Robert M. Catts erected the building in 1913 from plans of Buchman & Kahn, architects, and the present tenantry of the building is composed of some of the most prominent firms in the textile world. The ground floor store is occupied by M. H. Rogers, upholsteries and tapestries.

The adjoining corner of Twentieth Street was for many years the site of the Continental Hotel, which since the erection of 920 Broadway has been replaced with a large mercantile building.

Rogers-Astaire Film to Be Reissued in July

By Louella O. Parsons

Motion Picture Editor International News Service

One of the best Ginger Rogers-Fred Astaire musicals, made as long ago as 1935, will be reissued on July 18. A slight reediting job has been done, and those of the RKO crowd who have seen this musical say it's as good today as it was when Ginger and Fred were the dancing darlings of the screen world.

Edward Everett Horton supplies the laughs, and the direction of the late Mark Sandrich is as effective as though the musical had just been finished today.

The reissue of this film, I think, will start a trend of other old hits being shown at theaters throughout the country.

mean. And when Rita's through, boy, she's through.

I didn't have any idea that Frank Pulaski, whom I recently met, is a nephew of the late Jack Pulaski, a very old friend who was on Variety in New York for many, many years. Then I met Alice Glazer, Frank's aunt, and she told me all about her nephew.

Frank is playing the role of Quintus in "The Robe." His first picture was "Desert Rats," and Alice tells me he is a very talented boy and that he writes as well as he acts.

Since meeting Frank I am told he has spent $2500 in flowers, gifts and telephone calls, trying to woo back his ex-wife, Virginia Rhodes, high fashion model. That's just about what he's made to date on "The Robe."

Chatter in Hollywood: Saw Anne Baxter at Hedda Hopper's cocktail party and she tells me she's leaving for Europe immediately to be gone six weeks—her first trip. Her mother goes with her.

But, I'll be surprised if she doesn't see Oliver Thorndyke in New York, since I hear from the Big Town that she and Thorndyke are very much thata way. He telephones her every day.

Those who saw Cinemascope asked the name of the pretty "near-sighted" girl who sat with David Wayne in the airplane scene.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

GINGER ROGERS

It's up to Merle Oberon to make up her mind whether she wants to go to Germany in September to star in "Sister of the Moon."

She's read Walter Reisch's script and is crazy about it, but it's going to be difficult for Merle to tear herself away from handsome Dr. Rex Ross. Being a busy doctor, it's impossible for him to go with her.

However, Merle's career has taken such an upward move that I have a feeling she won't want to turn down a script as good as this. I hear from all sides it's a great story.

For the third year in succession Pennsylvania won the two mile race at the relays, though the only opponent was a second team entered to take the place of the other college quartettes which had withdrawn. Yale again won the mile championship in a desperate struggle with Pennsylvania and Chicago, the three last runners staggering over the finish line almost together. Michigan scored her second victory in the four miles. In the special events the Red and Blue scored one victory, this falling to T. P. Hammer, who cleared 22 ft. 4 in. in the broad jump.

The intercollegiate championships were held on Franklin Field for the second time this year, and while Pennsylvania made a good showing, she finished only fourth with 18 points. Four men made this total. H. A. Hyman took the quarter mile in 49 2-5 seconds and then ran a splendid race in the 220 yards where he was second. E. S. Amstler was first in the 120 yards hurdles and second over the low sticks, his time for the first event being 15 3-5 seconds. The other two point winners were J. D. Whitham, who finished fourth in the 220 yards dash, and Captain Boyd, who, although only fourth in the shot put, again broke the Pennsylvania record with a put of 44 ft. 3 3/4 in. The feature performance of the meet from a Pennsylvania standpoint was the work of Hyman in the quarter mile. In all of his previous years he had never been able to score at these games though always doing exceptionally well in the dual and other meets. In this race Hy-
